Allow me to introduce myself!

My name is Darren Siriani, and I am the man behind DAS Technology Consulting. Throughout my career, I have always believed in putting the client first and have developed a solid reputation for negotiating and creating strong business relationships. As an IT advisor, I deliver enterprise services and solutions to clients in a variety of verticals.

I cherish my time with clients, and whether it's through attending events regularly, or networking as much as possible, I only have one goal in mind: simplify the sales process, as well as aid people through the complex challenges we face today in IT. I work tirelessly to meet the exact demands of those who I work with.

Over the years, DAS has received many positive end user references and been behind many success stories. I look forward to making your acquaintance and connecting in the near future.
